PROCEEDINGS

On September 1, 2011, Petitioner filed a Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus by a Person in State Custody pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2254, raising three claims for relief, one of which he later voluntarily dismissed. On July 31, 2012, Respondent filed an Answer with an attached memorandum. Petitioner did not file a reply. The parties consented to the jurisdiction of the undersigned U.S. Magistrate Judge pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 636(c). For the reasons discussed below, the Court denies the Petition and dismisses this action with prejudice.

BACKGROUND

Petitioner was imprisoned after pleading guilty to an

1 unspecified offense in 1979 and was released on parole on October 2 14, 2009. (Pet. Attach. F at 1, 3.) The special conditions of 3 his parole included the requirements that he register as a sex 4 offender under California Penal Code section 290.011 and that he 5 not possess or have access to children's clothing. (Lodged Doc.
6 3, Ex. E at 2-3.) On March 5, 2010, Petitioner was arrested at 7 his wife's residence for violating those two conditions. (Pet.
8 Attach. F at 2.) On April 20, 2010, Petitioner received a nine-9 month prison term for violating his parole. (Pet. "Attached 10 Sheet #3.")

11 On July 27, 2010, Petitioner pleaded guilty to failing to 12 register as a transient sex offender (Cal. Penal Code 13 § 290.011(b)) and was sentenced to 44 months in prison. (Pet. at 14 2; Lodged Docs. 1-2.) He did not file a direct appeal. (Pet. at 15 2-3 (noting that his filing in the court of appeal was a 16 "petition for writ of habeas corpus").)

17 On December 17, 2010, Petitioner constructively filed a 18 habeas petition in Los Angeles County Superior Court, claiming 19 that California Penal Code section 290.011 was impermissibly 20 applied to him retroactively because it was not in effect when he 21 pleaded guilty, in 1979, and that he had been impermissibly 22 denied mental health treatment while on parole, which had caused 23 him to violate the terms of his parole. (Oct. 24, 2012 Lodged 24 Doc.) On February 24, 2011, before the earlier petition had been 25 ruled on, Petitioner constructively filed two more habeas 26 petitions in Los Angeles County Superior Court. (Lodged Docs. 3 27 & 5.) The first claimed that "Petitioner was denied his rights 28 to participate in [] parole outpatient clinic services under

1 California Code of Reg[ulations], Title 15, Division 3, Article
2 9, Section 3610(a)" (Lodged Doc. 3, Attach. at 8) and that 3 Petitioner's counsel was constitutionally ineffective in failing 4 to adequately investigate potentially mitigating circumstances 5 regarding Petitioner's potential sentence before advising him to 6 plead guilty (id. at 9).<sup>1</sup> The second February 24, 2011 petition 7 was substantially similar. (See Lodged Doc. 5.) On March 18, 8 2011, the superior court denied the December 2010 petition, 9 finding that even if certain parole conditions had been 10 unlawfully applied to Petitioner, they were "irrelevant to the 11 fact that petitioner failed to register his address with law 12 enforcement" and therefore did not undermine his conviction.
13 (Lodged Doc. 8, Attach. F at 6.) On March 29, 2011, the court 14 denied the February 24, 2011 petitions for various reasons.
15 (Lodged Doc. 4.) The court rejected petitioner's ineffective-16 assistance-of-counsel claim on the merits. (Id.) One of 17 Petitioner's February 24 petitions was apparently forwarded to 18 the court again for decision (see Lodged Doc. 5 at 1 (showing 19 various file stamps indicating that it was received in the 20

21
22 <sup>1</sup>It appears that Petitioner may have earlier filed other 23 superior court habeas petitions, challenging various aspects of his 24 parole violations and his conviction for failure to register (see 25 Lodged Doc. 8, Attach. F at 5 (referencing February 8, 2011 26 petitions)); those petitions have not been lodged with the Court.
27 They were denied on March 29, 2011: the superior court found that 28 Petitioner's challenges to his parole conditions were moot because he was no longer subject to them given that he had been reincarcerated for a new offense; the court noted that "plea bargains are 'deemed to incorporate and contemplate not only the existing law but the reserve power of the state to amend the law or enact additional laws for the public good and in pursuance of public policy.'" (Id.)

1 appellate division on February 28, filed on April 1, and received 2 in the "North District" on April 6)), and the court declined to 3 rule on it, instead ordering that the court's earlier denial be 4 re-sent to Petitioner. (See Lodged Doc. 5 at 42.)

5 On April 11, 2011, Petitioner constructively filed a habeas 6 petition in the California Court of Appeal, raising claims 7 generally corresponding to grounds one and two of the federal 8 Petition. (Lodged Doc. 6.) That petition was summarily denied 9 on May 12, 2011. (Lodged Doc. 7.) On June 7, 2011, Petitioner 10 constructively filed a habeas petition raising the same claims in 11 the California Supreme Court, which summarily denied it on August 12 10, 2011. (Lodged Docs. 8, 9.)

13 On September 1, 2011, Petitioner filed the instant Petition.
14 It alleged three grounds for relief: (1) Petitioner's counsel was 15 constitutionally ineffective in failing to adequately investigate 16 whether Petitioner's parole was revoked for having failed to 17 register as a sex offender before the statutory period for him to 18 re-register had expired (Pet. at 5 & "Attached Sheet #1"); (2)
19 Petitioner's due process rights were violated because his parole
20 was revoked for having failed to register as a sex offender
21 before the statutory period for him to re-register had expired 22 (Pet. at 5 & "Attached Sheet #2"); and (3) Petitioner was 23 punished twice for the same offense, thereby violating double 24 jeopardy, by having his parole revoked and a nine-month sentence 25 imposed and then being prosecuted criminally for the same 26 conduct, resulting in a 44-month sentence (Pet. at 5-6 & 27 "Attached Sheet #3"). On April 18, 2012, after the Court issued 28 a Report and Recommendation recommending that the Petition be

1 dismissed without prejudice because it was not fully exhausted 2 unless within 21 days of the district judge's acceptance of the 3 Report and Recommendation Petitioner voluntarily dismissed ground 4 three, Petitioner requested that ground three be dismissed. On 5 April 20, 2012, the Court granted Petitioner's request, dismissed 6 ground three of the Petition, vacated its Report and 7 Recommendation, and ordered Respondent to file an Answer to the 8 Petition.

9 STANDARD OF REVIEW

10 Under 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d), as amended by AEDPA:

11 An application for a writ of habeas corpus on behalf of 12 a person in custody pursuant to the judgment of a State 13 court shall not be granted with respect to any claim that 14 was adjudicated on the merits in State court proceedings 15 unless the adjudication of the claim – (1) resulted in a 16 decision that was contrary to, or involved an 17 unreasonable application of, clearly established Federal 18 law, as determined by the Supreme Court of the United 19 States; or (2) resulted in a decision that was based on 20 an unreasonable determination of the facts in light of 21 the evidence presented in the State court proceeding.

22 Under AEDPA, the "clearly established Federal law" that 23 controls federal habeas review of state-court decisions consists 24 of holdings of Supreme Court cases "as of the time of the 25 relevant state-court decision." Williams v. Taylor, 529 U.S.
26 362, 412, 120 S. Ct. 1495, 1523, 146 L. Ed. 2d 389 (2000).

27 Although a particular state-court decision may be both 28 "contrary to" and "an unreasonable application of" controlling

1 Supreme Court law, the two phrases have distinct meanings. Id.
2 at 391, 413. A state-court decision is "contrary to" clearly 3 established federal law if it either applies a rule that 4 contradicts governing Supreme Court law or reaches a result that 5 differs from the result the Supreme Court reached on "materially 6 indistinguishable" facts. Early v. Packer, 537 U.S. 3, 8, 123 S.
7 Ct. 362, 365, 154 L. Ed. 2d 263 (2002). A state court need not 8 cite or even be aware of the controlling Supreme Court cases, "so 9 long as neither the reasoning nor the result of the state-court 10 decision contradicts them." Id.

11 State-court decisions that are not "contrary to" Supreme 12 Court law may be set aside on federal habeas review only "if they 13 are not merely erroneous, but 'an unreasonable application' of 14 clearly established federal law, or based on 'an unreasonable 15 determination of the facts' (emphasis added)." Id. at 11. A 16 state-court decision that correctly identified the governing 17 legal rule may be rejected if it unreasonably applied the rule to 18 the facts of a particular case. Williams, 529 U.S. at 406-08.
19 To obtain federal habeas relief for such an "unreasonable 20 application," however, a petitioner must show that the state 21 court's application of Supreme Court law was "objectively 22 unreasonable." Id. at 409-10. In other words, habeas relief is 23 warranted only if the state court's ruling was "so lacking in 24 justification that there was an error well understood and 25 comprehended in existing law beyond any possibility for 26 fairminded disagreement." Harrington v. Richter, 562 U.S. ___, 27 131 S. Ct. 770, 786-87, 178 L. Ed. 2d 624 (2011).

28 Petitioner appears to have raised ground one, or some

1 semblance of it, in a habeas petition to the Los Angeles County
2 Superior Court, which denied it in a reasoned decision. (Lodged 3 Docs. 3-5.) He then raised it in subsequent petitions to the 4 court of appeal and supreme court, both of which summarily denied 5 it. (Lodged Docs. 6-9.) The Court "looks through" the state 6 supreme court's silent denial on habeas to the last reasoned 7 decision, in this case the superior court's decision, as the 8 basis for the state court's judgment and reviews Petitioner's 9 claim under the deferential AEDPA standard. See Ylst v.
10 Nunnemaker, 501 U.S. 797, 803-04, 111 S. Ct. 2590, 2595, 115 L.
11 Ed. 2d 706 (1991) (holding that California Supreme Court, by its 12 silent denial of petition for review, presumably did not intend 13 to change court of appeal's analysis); Bonner v. Carey, 425 F.3d 14 1145, 1148 n.13 (9th Cir. 2005) (applying Ylst in state habeas 15 context).<sup>2</sup>

16 Petitioner raised ground two in habeas petitions to the 17 state court of appeal and supreme court; the petitions were 18 summarily denied. (Lodged Docs. 6-9.) Because no reasoned 19 state-court decision exists as to ground two, the Court conducts 20 an independent review of the record to determine whether the 21 state supreme court, in denying the claim, was objectively
22 unreasonable in applying controlling federal law. See Haney v.
23

24 <sup>2</sup>The Court declines to adopt Respondent's position that the 25 "look through" doctrine applies only when the last reasoned
26 decision on a claim imposed a procedural bar. (See Answer at 4-5.)
27 Nothing in Ylst limits its holding to that context; indeed, it 28 explicitly states, "Where there has been one reasoned state judgment rejecting a federal claim, later unexplained orders upholding that judgment or rejecting the same claim rest upon the same ground." 501 U.S. at 803.

1 Adams, 641 F.3d 1168, 1171 (9th Cir.) (holding that independent 2 review "is not de novo review of the constitutional issue, but 3 only a means to determine whether the state court decision is 4 objectively unreasonable" (internal quotation marks omitted)),
 5 cert. denied, 132 S. Ct. 551 (2011); see also Richter, 131 S. Ct.
 6 at 784, 786 (holding that "petitioner's burden still must be met 7 by showing there was no reasonable basis for the state court to 8 deny relief," and reviewing court "must determine what arguments
 9 or theories supported or . . . could have supported[] the state 10 court's decision[,] and then it must ask whether it is possible 11 fairminded jurists could disagree that those arguments or 12 theories are inconsistent with the holding in a prior decision of 13 [the Supreme Court]").

14 DISCUSSION

15 I. Habeas relief is not warranted on Petitioner's ineffective- 16 assistance-of-counsel claim

17 Petitioner asserts that his trial counsel was 18 constitutionally ineffective by "provid[ing] bad advice," 19 advising him to plead guilty without "investigat[ing] into 20 potential mitigating evidence," and "fail[ing] to provide 21 substitute counsel." (Pet. at 5, "Attached Sheet #1.")

22 Under Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S. 668, 687, 104 S.
 23 Ct. 2052, 2064, 80 L. Ed. 2d 674 (1984), a petitioner claiming 24 ineffective assistance of counsel must show that counsel's 25 performance was deficient and that the deficient performance
 26 prejudiced his defense. "Deficient performance" means 27 unreasonable representation falling below professional norms
 28 prevailing at the time of trial. Id. at 688-89. To show

1 deficient performance, the petitioner must overcome a "strong 2 presumption" that his lawyer "rendered adequate assistance and 3 made all significant decisions in the exercise of reasonable 4 professional judgment." Id. at 690. Further, the petitioner 5 "must identify the acts or omissions of counsel that are alleged 6 not to have been the result of reasonable professional judgment."
7 Id. The initial court considering the claim must then "determine 8 whether, in light of all the circumstances, the identified acts 9 or omissions were outside the wide range of professionally 10 competent assistance." Id.

11 The Supreme Court has recognized that "it is all too easy 12 for a court, examining counsel's defense after it has proved 13 unsuccessful, to conclude that a particular act or omission of 14 counsel was unreasonable." Id. at 689. Accordingly, to overturn 15 the strong presumption of adequate assistance, the petitioner
16 must demonstrate that the challenged action could not reasonably 17 be considered sound trial strategy under the circumstances of the 18 case. Id.

19 To meet his burden of showing the distinctive kind of 20 "prejudice" required by Strickland, the petitioner must 21 affirmatively

22 show that there is a reasonable probability that, but for 23 counsel's unprofessional errors, the result of the 24 proceeding would have been different. A reasonable 25 probability is a probability sufficient to undermine 26 confidence in the outcome.

27 Id. at 694; see also Richter, 131 S. Ct. at 791 ("In assessing
28 prejudice under Strickland, the question is not whether a court

1 can be certain counsel's performance had no effect on the outcome 2 or whether it is possible a reasonable doubt might have been 3 established if counsel acted differently."). A court deciding an 4 ineffective-assistance-of-counsel claim need not address both 5 components of the inquiry if the petitioner makes an insufficient 6 showing on one. Strickland, 466 U.S. at 697.

7 In Richter, the Supreme Court reiterated that AEDPA requires 8 an additional level of deference to a state-court decision 9 rejecting an ineffective-assistance-of-counsel claim:

10 The pivotal question is whether the state court's 11 application of the Strickland standard was unreasonable.
12 This is different from asking whether defense counsel's 13 performance fell below Strickland's standard.

14 131 S. Ct. at 785. The Supreme Court further explained,

15 Establishing that a state court's application of 16 Strickland was unreasonable under § 2254(d) is all the 17 more difficult. The standards created by Strickland and 18 § 2254(d) are both "highly deferential," . . . and when 19 the two apply in tandem, review is "doubly" so. The 20 Strickland standard is a general one, so the range of 21 reasonable applications is substantial. Federal habeas 22 courts must guard against the danger of equating
23 unreasonableness under Strickland with unreasonableness 24 under § 2254(d). When § 2254(d) applies, the question is 25 not whether counsel's actions were reasonable. The 26 question is whether there is any reasonable argument that 27 counsel satisfied Strickland's deferential standard.

28 Id. at 788 (citations omitted).

1 In general, when a criminal defendant pleads guilty to an 2 offense, he cannot later claim deprivations of constitutional 3 rights that occurred prior to the entry of his guilty plea. See 4 Tollett v. Henderson, 411 U.S. 258, 266-67, 93 S. Ct. 1602, 1608, 5 36 L. Ed. 2d 235 (1973); see also Moran v. Godinez, 57 F.3d 690, 6 700 (9th Cir. 1994) (as amended) (foreclosing most preplea
7 ineffective-assistance-of-counsel claims), superseded by statute
8 on other grounds as recognized in McMurtrey v. Ryan, 539 F.3d
9 1112, 1119 (9th Cir. 2008).

10 The Supreme Court recently reaffirmed that when a petitioner 11 suffers prejudice because he rejected a plea based on his 12 lawyer's bad advice, he might be entitled to habeas relief. See 13 generally Lafler v. Cooper, 566 U.S. ___, 132 S. Ct. 1376, 182 L.
14 Ed. 2d 398 (2012). Here, of course, Petitioner accepted the plea 15 bargain he was offered, and therefore Lafler is not on point. In 16 any event, even assuming that the underlying principle of Lafler 17 applies here, Petitioner's claim fails on the merits because he 18 has not met his burden to show that his plea was not voluntary or 19 the state courts' application of the Strickland standard was 20 unreasonable.

21 The superior court denied Petitioner's claim as follows:

22 An ineffective assistance of counsel claim may be 23 denied when the record shows that the omission or error 24 resulted from an informed tactical choice within the 25 range of reasonable competence. Here the record is 26 devoid of any evidence that any of the tactical or 27 strategic decisions made by defense counsel resulted from 28 anything other than informed tactical choices within the

1 range of reasonable competence. (People v. Bunyard, 2 (1988) 45 Cal. 3d 1189).
3 (Lodged Doc. 4 at 1.) The superior court's holding was not 4 objectively unreasonable. In his federal Petition, Petitioner 5 fails to specifically identify what evidence his counsel should 6 have uncovered with further investigation and how it would have 7 been helpful to his case, what advice his counsel gave him and 8 how it was "bad," or in what regard his counsel failed to provide 9 "substitute counsel." On the face of the Petition, Petitioner is 10 not entitled to habeas relief. See Greenway v. Schriro, 653 F.3d 11 790, 804 (9th Cir. 2011) ("cursory and vague" claims of 12 ineffective assistance of counsel "cannot support habeas 13 relief").

14 Although Petitioner does not state that he incorporates the 15 arguments from his earlier state petitions into the federal 16 Petition, even if the Court construes the Petition liberally to 17 do so, see Allen v. Calderon, 408 F.3d 1150, 1153 (9th Cir. 2005)
18 (courts must "construe pro se habeas filings liberally"), 19 Petitioner is still not entitled to habeas relief. In his 20 February 24, 2011 superior court petitions, Petitioner alleged 21 that his counsel was ineffective in failing to investigate "a set 22 up or a conspiracy by parole agent D. Champlin and . . . the POC 23 doctor Kurger" to deny him mental health counseling and 24 medication, which he alleges would have prevented him from 25 violating his parole conditions. (Lodged Doc. 3, Mem. P. & A. at 26 6-10.) But Petitioner did not provide any evidence of this 27 alleged conspiracy other than his conclusory allegations, nor did 28 he state how the parole office's failure to provide mental health

1 treatment undermined his conviction or sentence. He does not 2 claim that because of his mental condition he didn't understand 3 that he had to re-register; rather, he argues that his particular 4 circumstances did not require re-registration. And nothing in 5 section 290.011 provides for a different registration requirement
6 or a lesser sentence for transient sex offenders undergoing 7 mental health counseling. See Cal. Penal Code § 290.011. Thus, 8 it was not objectively unreasonable for the superior court to 9 conclude that Petitioner's counsel's advice to plead guilty was 10 an "informed tactical choice within the range of reasonable 11 competence." (Lodged Doc. 4 at 1.)

12 In his court of appeal and supreme court habeas petitions, 13 Petitioner refined his arguments to allege that his counsel was 14 deficient in failing to investigate or present the defense that 15 he was not guilty because he had five days to register his new 16 address after moving to a new residence and had been staying at 17 his wife's house for only three days before he was arrested.
18 (Lodged Doc. 6, Mem. P. & A. at 2-11; Lodged Doc. 8, Mem. P. & A.
19 at 1-13.) Petitioner conceded that he told his counsel this 20 information (see Lodged Doc. 6, Mem. P. & A. at 3); his counsel, 21 apparently fully aware of Petitioner's contentions, nonetheless 22 advised him to plead guilty. Petitioner states that counsel told 23 him that "the possible consequences of taking this case to trial 24 . . . would more likely result in Petitioner receiving the 25 maximum term . . . and the maximum penalty for being a second 26 striker." (Lodged Doc. 8, Mem. P. & A. at 3.)

27 It was not objectively unreasonable for the state courts to 28 conclude that Petitioner's counsel's actions constituted sound

1 trial strategy. See Barrios v. Dexter, No. CV 08-6411-GHK (DTB),
2 2010 WL 935756, at *9 (C.D. Cal. Mar. 12, 2010) (counsel not 3 deficient in advising petitioner to plead guilty when 4 petitioner's purported defense "gave rise to no viable defense").
5 A finder of fact may not have believed Petitioner's story that he 6 was living at his wife's house for only three "working" days.
7 Petitioner admitted that he charged his Global Positioning System 8 ("GPS") tracking device and ate meals at his wife's house, and 9 that it was difficult for him to find other shelter. (See Lodged 10 Doc. 6, Mem. P. & A. at 2, 4-6.) Moreover, Petitioner's GPS 11 showed that "on several different dates" in the month leading up 12 to his arrest he spent more than 24 hours at a time at his wife's 13 house. (See Lodged Doc. 8, Attach. A.) Petitioner's medications 14 and mail were found in one of the home's bedrooms, along with 15 men's clothing. (Id.) Under the circumstances, it was 16 reasonable for his attorney to conclude that the judge or a jury 17 would not have found Petitioner's assertions to the contrary 18 credible (particularly given that Petitioner was a convicted sex 19 offender) and may well have sentenced him to a longer sentence
20 than the 44 months Petitioner received as a result of his guilty
21 plea. Because the state courts' rejection of Petitioner's 22 ineffective-assistance claim was not objectively unreasonable, 23 Petitioner is not entitled to habeas relief. See also Lambert v.
24 Blodgett, 393 F.3d 943, 982 (9th Cir. 2004) ("Courts have 25 generally rejected claims of ineffective assistance premised on a 26 failure to investigate where the . . . additional evidence was 27 unlikely to change the outcome at trial."); Jackson v. Calderon, 28 211 F.3d 1148, 1154-55 (9th Cir. 2000) (finding no prejudice from

1 counsel's alleged failure to investigate when petitioner did not 2 meet his burden to present evidence that investigation would have 3 revealed favorable evidence).

4 II. Habeas relief is not warranted on Petitioner's second claim

5 Respondent construes ground two as a challenge to the 6 sentence Petitioner received for violating his parole conditions
7 and argues that such a claim is not cognizable because Petitioner
8 is currently in custody on a new criminal conviction, independent 9 of his parole revocation. (See Answer at 9-10.) If Respondent's 10 construction of Petitioner's claim is accurate, Respondent is 11 correct that Petitioner may not challenge a sentence on which he 12 is no longer in custody. See Maleng v. Cook, 490 U.S. 488, 490-13 91, 109 S. Ct. 1923, 1925, 104 L. Ed. 2d 540 (1989) (28 U.S.C.
14 § 2254(a) requires "that the habeas petitioner be in custody 15 under the conviction or sentence under attack at the time his 16 petition is filed" (internal quotation marks omitted)). But as 17 the Court earlier noted in its Report and Recommendation 18 (see Docket No. 19 at 9-10), ground two may arguably be liberally 19 construed as a challenge to the sufficiency of the evidence 20 supporting Petitioner's criminal conviction for failure to 21 register, which appears to be how Petitioner framed this claim 22 before the California Supreme Court. (See Lodged Doc. 8, Mem. P.
23 & A. at 7-10.) That construction of the claim is consistent with 24 Petitioner's allegations as to ground one that his counsel was 25 ineffective for not making the very same arguments to challenge 26 his criminal conviction. (See Pet. at 5, "Attached Sheet #1"; 27 Lodged Doc. 8, Mem. P. & A. at 12.)

28 To the extent Petitioner's second claim can be construed as

1 challenging the sufficiency of the evidence to support his 2 failure-to-register conviction, however, it still fails because 3 he pleaded guilty to the offense and therefore cannot claim that 4 the prosecution's evidence was insufficient. (See Lodged Doc. 2 5 at 1-2 (noting that Petitioner "knowingly, understandingly, and 6 explicitly" waived rights and pleaded guilty)); Tollett, 411 U.S.
7 at 266-67; Hector v. Poulos, 648 F. Supp. 2d 1194, 1197 (C.D.
8 Cal. 2009) ("A defendant who pleads guilty is convicted and 9 sentenced according to his plea and not upon the evidence.");
10 Martin v. Dexter, No. EDCV 08-00693-DOC (MLG), 2008 WL 4381519, 11 at *7 (C.D. Cal. Sept. 23, 2008) ("By pleading guilty . . .
12 Petitioner effectively waived any claim that his constitutional 13 rights were violated as to pretrial matters, which includes a 14 challenge to the sufficiency of the evidence." (citing Tollett)).
15 Moreover, as outlined above, Petitioner has failed to show that 16 his counsel was constitutionally ineffective in advising him to 17 plead guilty or that his plea was not voluntary as a result. As 18 previously recounted, the evidence against Petitioner was quite 19 strong. See Lambert, 393 F.3d at 984 (counsel not ineffective
20 for failing to investigate and uncover potentially exculpatory 21 evidence before advising petitioner to plead guilty in part 22 because evidence of guilt was overwhelming). Thus, on 23 independent review, the Court finds that the state courts' 24 rejection of this claim was not objectively unreasonable.
